Sale & Leaseback Finance

A sale and leaseback agreement can be a powerful way to boost your business's cash flow without sacrificing essential equipment or vehicles. If you're asset-rich but cash-poor, this solution allows you to sell an asset to a lender and immediately lease it back—keeping your business running smoothly while freeing up much-needed capital.

This option is particularly useful for covering pressing expenses like wages, tax obligations, or supplier payments all without interrupting operations.

How Does a Sale & Leaseback Work?

A sale and leaseback arrangement is straightforward:

Sell an asset – You sell a vehicle, piece of machinery, or equipment to one of our lenders.

Get a cash injection – You receive the funds upfront, giving your business a major boost in liquidity.

Lease it back – The lender leases the same asset back to you, allowing you to continue using it as if nothing has changed.

This provides immediate access to capital while retaining full operational use of the equipment your business depends on.

What Assets Can Be Used?

Almost any commercial equipment or vehicle with value can be included in a sale and leaseback, including:

Trucks & Buses

Heavy & Light Commercial Vehicles

Farm & Agricultural Machinery

Construction Equipment

Specialised Business Equipment & Machinery

Benefits of a Sale & Leaseback

Frequently Asked Questions

Can I use multiple assets for a sale and leaseback? Yes. Businesses often use more than one piece of equipment or vehicle to generate a larger cash injection. What happens at the end of the lease? You may have the option to continue leasing, upgrade your equipment, or negotiate a buyback depending on your agreement. Is it available for businesses with bad credit?

Yes. Many lenders in our network work with businesses that don't have perfect credit histories.

How long does the process take? Depending on the asset and lender, approval and funding can often be completed within a few days. <https://www.natloans.com.au>
